This Week in Crypto

Crypto has been on an uproar over the last few weeks with a total Crypto market cap touching approximately $2.50 trillion dollars which is a little under the All Time Highs (ATH) for the crypto market. One of the most historical events took place towards the end of the week, the approval of Bitcoin (BTC) Electronically Traded Funds (ETFs) was announced. These funds are futures based BTC funds and not a traditional ETF which is normally backed by the asset it represents. Nonetheless, it's a step in the right direction for Crypto compliance. This led to Bitcoin (BTC) growing approximately 13% over the last week putting it near previous ATHs and leading to the highest weekly candle close for BTC ever. The Cryptonairz team has been growing in size and events, make sure to tune in on YouTube where we also host daily Crypto news, host various events with notable individuals and even post guides. New Projects

This week's new reviewed projects includes the following projects:

- Mysterium (MYST)
- MahaDAO ($MAHA)
- Suterusu ($SUTER)
- Wadzpays (WTK)

If you are interested in more details about this project please refer to the write ups in the discord or ask one of our moderators.

StrongBlock Updates

StrongBlock has continued to expand the list of StrongBlock holders who can launch the new DVPN Sentinel nodes. StrongBlock has announced that it will be providing its Node-as-a-Service (NaaS) in collaboration with Fantom (FTM) and also Polygon (MATIC). In the weekly AMA David Moss mentioned that Strong is working on node migration for individuals who have had compromised wallets. Lastly, it was mentioned that a form of fractional node ownership is in the works and that Strong is working on claim routing which will allow users to roll over rewards to new nodes without having to pay fees.
