This Week in Crypto

This week in Crypto was very exciting with the Crypto market cap rallying up to approximately $2.35 trillion dollars after two relatively low weeks of volume and price action. Shiba Inu (SHIBA) skyrocketed in gains over the last week with over 300% gains, which signaled to some that perhaps we are getting ready to jump into a full fledged bull-market. In addition to this, several analyses such as Stock-to-Flow (STF) and BTC on chain analysis show that the market is gaining positive sentiment as it normally does historically in Q4. One of our recent passive plays, Presearch (PRE), has now officially increased their staking requirements from 1000 to 2000 tokens. We are always working on the newest passive plays! The Cryptonairz team has been growing in size and events, make sure to tune in on YouTube where we also host daily Crypto news, host various events with notable individuals and even post guides. StrongBlock Updates

StrongBlock has continued to expand the list of StrongBlock holders who can launch the new DVPN Sentinel nodes. StrongBlock has announced that it will be providing its Node-as-a-Service (NaaS) in collaboration with Fantom (FTM) and also Polygon (MATIC), which are two incredibly solid projects to bring aboard the strong network. In the weekly AMA David Moss mentioned that Strong is working on node migration for individuals who have had compromised wallets. Lastly, it was mentioned that a form of fractional node ownership is in the works.
