THIS WEEK IN CRYPTO

Last week was one weighted with emotion for cryptocurrency investors as Bitcoin ($BTC) and Ethereum ($ETH) prices tumbled to new three month lows. BTC briefly fell below the $40,000 threshold before it bounced back to the $41,000 level on Monday. While BTC and ETH recovered some of their losses, the vast majority of the market saw an overall sideways trend. The controversial opinion that we have entered into a long term bear market remains looming and hotly debated among the twitter community. Regulation and government backed cryptocurrencies will continue to be a hot topic of discussion as we progress into 2022. U.S. Republican congressman and long time crypto enthusiast Tom Emmer introduced legislation on Wednesday that would prohibit the Fed from moving forward with a government-issued digital currency. Emmer does not believe the U.S. federal government should have the ability to compete with the private banking sector or have the authority to offer a CBDC and argues that it would begin a trajectory of digital authoritarianism similar to that of China's. The DAO market has witnessed red in recent months as fear has made its way into the market. Hector DAO promotes themselves as the "spoon" of OHM and continues to make substantial progress towards their roadmap goals. HEC was the latest recipient of the Fantom Foundation Incentive Grant which rewards the DAO with 208,333 fantom per month for 12 months. Per the vote of the holders, HEC will soon be listed on MEXC which is a top 25 exchange and is expected to drive trading volume.

The THOR Team reached a major accomplishment this week becoming the first RING fork to successfully recover in price action after the DeFi as a Service (DaaS) market took a hit. Last month, prices rapidly declined as the community lost hope in RING and the long term viability of the project. THORs price was heavily impacted. It climbed back into the triple digits over the weekend as the team began implementing a solution that would merging the DaaS model with the more trusted Nodes as a Service (NaaS) model, one familiar to those of us who are invested in STRONG. THOR became the first project to fuse the Daas + NaaS model and bring a validator node to the avalanche network. After witnessing the success, the POWER Team has opted to follow in the leadership of THOR and work towards creating a new contract allowing their code to be independent of RINGs. They are building the Daas + NaaS model with the ultimate goal of creating a validator node on the FTM network and we are excited to see how things progress.

Greenheart CBD ($CBD) is a project focused on farming, and no not the crypto farming you're thinking of. Good old fashioned hemp farming! CBD is a platform that aims to provide financing to farmers around the world that will allow them to grow hemp for CBD production, substantially increasing their incomes and improving their quality of life. The platform will use advanced decentralized smart contracts across multiple blockchain networks.
